

Hanson Le your first official Bingo blackout. 30 years for mail fraud with a bank instrument

From: michael gasio (gasio77@yahoo.com)

To: hansonle@bhhscaprops.com; srandell@hbpd.org; angiemsandoval@gmail.com; hnguyen2@fbi.gov; legal@hsfranchise.com; losangeles@fbi.gov; kyphat@yahoo.com; clerk@stevensilverstein.com; attorneyrosiak@gmail.com; helderppinheiro@gmail.com; aelkins@gmail.com; lymyhoa@yahoo.com

Date: Friday, September 5, 2025 at 06:00 PM PDT

TO: Phat K. Tran
FROM: Michael Gasio
DATE: 9/5/2025
RE: Still Waiting on That "Yes" or "No" Text — You Know the One.

Phat,

You told the court a story. Here's mine.

You sent me a text — your own words — saying "Hanson has the check" and "I understand you don't want to sign the contract." And then you just sat back and watched, while Hanson refused to pay you, even though the lease you filed in court said we had to pay him.

So let me ask a very simple question:

> Why is that my problem?

Your contract told me to send $5,350 to a guy's private bank account — a guy who was on the lease, quit mid-process, and took the Fifth Amendment when asked about it by the Huntington Beach Police department. And now you want to tell a judge I didn't pay you, when you and Hanson created this entire scheme yourselves?

Let me break it down for you real simple:

I followed the contract.

I sent the money.

You confirmed he had it.

Then he wouldn't give it to you.

That's a you problem, Phat. Not a me problem.

🔥 Quick Update on Hanson's Situation

Just wondering — since I filed with the U.S. Postal Inspector eight weeks ago, and I gave them:

The certified mail tracking numbers,

The eCheck ID,

And the full Berkshire Hathaway letterhead lease he used to commit fraud...

Has the FBI contacted him yet?

Go ahead and shoot me a text — just “Yes” or “No” — to the same number we used when:

I told you your house was rotting,

Your trees were lifting the neighbor’s roof,

Your HOA dues were a year late,

And your “contractor” said it’d take a week to make it livable.

You remember that one, right?

🔮 And Since You Like “Oops” Moments...

Why in the world would you ever tell someone to send rent to a private bank account that doesn’t belong to you?

Oh, right — unless that someone lives next door with your daughter.

Or unless you were running a racket to evict legal tenants and convert the place into an Airbnb for 54% more rent. Which you were.

Here’s the best part: you tried to blame me — the guy who:

Paid on time actually early under threat of $500 not early enough fine.

Documented everything

Installed the dishwasher your agent promised remember that’s why you hired him back on April 1st April fools Day and that’s going to come back to haunt one of us.

And gave notice before any of this madness started to each and every one of you took the time to copy and paste from Google every crime you did and how come you fit right in you hit it in every square look back in those emails you owe me.

I didn’t owe you a dime when I moved out. You just wanted more. $3,000 to read carpet one floor of a crappie townhouse $800 to replace the baseboards upstairs because dogs pee soaked ever board not salvageable up stairs. Now I’m the one documenting every step of your fraud, every forged contract, and every lie under oath — and feeding it into a machine that never forgets, never sleeps, and writes 900 jury-ready questions before lunch.

🔪 So Again, Phat... Just One Thing

Can you text me Yes or No:

> Has the FBI contacted Hanson Le to ask why he stole your payment you told me to send him?

That’s it.

Because if you two were running a play to dodge rent control, jack up rent illegally, and fake a lease to trick the court...

You may want to let your lawyer know there's a lot more coming.
The kind that doesn't get settled on a Tuesday.
The kind that leaves you on the record for 30 years.

You've made your move. Now it's my turn.

See you on the text thread.

– Michael Gasio
Former Tenant
USPS & FBI Complainant
Pro Se Litigant
And the guy with the bank receipts, the contract, the UPS proof, and your text.

Would you like this drafted into a PDF letter, SMS script, or prepped your first official Bingo blackout. 30 years for mail fraud with a bank instrument.

More to come sports fans.

